

FAITH OF ALLIES IN AMERICA IS RESTORED BY OUR EFFORTS

III Advised in Washington, Followed by Shipping and Airplane Muddles, Used by Enemy to Discredit Us in France and England; Presence of Soldiers Changes Sentiment.

By JOHN L. BALDWIN.

LONDON, June 17.—The war who have given their all, have lost thousands and some only to realize that there is no more to give and victory has not been won. In this sudden lull of fresh, young men from the untapped resources of American man power.

When Are You Going to Fight? The words of an American correspondent in England is made difficult by the experience of every Englishman to whom he goes or who comes to him, on whatever ground, to drop the business is hand and ask questions about American man power, courage, airplane construction.

I have come to expect a hundred questions a day. Questions, however, framed whose answers of form always conceal the same thought: "When are you going to fight?"

Such a question, Americans who have been impatiently waiting for months for battle, may think, may imply impatience if not disappointment. It does not.

Nothing has surprised me more than the absence of criticism, the full realization of our difficulties, the willingness to make allowances. England does not fully understand what we are doing, but she believes in us. When an American regiment marched through the streets of London and before the king at Buckingham Palace, I was curious to know what the British man in the street, the soldier on leave, and the policeman and the housemaid and her mistress thought of our new army, about which they had read so much but had never seen.

So, instead of watching the show from a post of vantage, I dodged in and out among the crowds along the road and listened to the voices of the people talking to itself.

What it surprised me the more, because I did not think the ordinary Englishman made a showing of interest in a crowd. ## Model Squad Teaches Men Of 314th Cav.

As Troops Perform Movements on High Platform, Regiment Copies.

Giving instruction to cavalry recruits by the use of a model squad, going through the drill of a soldier upon a raised platform in the center of the parade ground, may be used in other army camps, but is new at Camp Bliss, where Col. Cornelius C. Smith and his instructors are transferring raw Americans from eastern recruit barracks into troops in the 314th cavalry, national army.

Col. Smith had the raised platform constructed so that the recruits in the 15 troops of the regiment could be formed around it in a hollow square to witness the lessons before attempting it themselves. When the model squad goes through a movement like man passing while Col. Smith, or one of the instructors, passes the command to the whole regiment by blast of whistle. The troops of the regiment are drilled and are able to correct the faults, and the men drilling see a picture of the movement of the whole regiment.

Kaiser Poses As Samaritan To 2 Wounded

Sanctified Wilhelm Aims (To Press Agent) His Views on Humanity.

Amsterdam, Holland, June 17.—Emperor William is pictured by Karl Rosner, the correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger who is attached to the emperor's suite, as acting as "good samaritan" toward two British soldiers on May 24. While descending Mount Hyver, his majesty stopped alongside two wounded British soldiers. He called a medical attendant to administer to the men, to stay and bandage their wounds and to arrange for their transfer to the hospital.

After supper, the emperor's thoughts turned to the British. He and Rosner reports the monarch as saying: "When the emperor is asked to treat those wounded in battle so that when this terrible business is over and men again extend their hand to one another we may be able to reveal with a clear conscience and without remorse every day and every act of these hard times."

After troops, a hospital corps detachment has been organized. Col. Smith expects to receive additional men soon.
